

You have been charged with a Major Offense under the Tennis Anti-Corruption Program
(See paragraph A of the accompanying letter)

Do you admit the offense(s)?

Yes

No

If you admit the offense(s), there will not be a full hearing but you can still give your views to the AHO on what sanction they should impose. The AHO may reduce your sanction if you admit the offense.

The AHO will convene a hearing to consider evidence presented by the ITIA and you, and then decide if you committed the offense(s) and, if so, the sanction they should impose.

Do you want to give your views to the AHO on the applicable sanction?

No

AHO decides you committed the offense(s)

Send your written submission by date set by the AHO

AHO hearing in person/by video conference

AHO decides the appropriate sanction
For a Major Offense this is likely to involve a significant suspension from participating in tennis (in any capacity, e.g. player, coach etc) and a fine.

AHO decides you did not commit the offense(s)
You will be free to participate in tennis.

Appeal

Both you and the ITIA can appeal the AHO's decision to the Court of Arbitration for Sport in Switzerland.
